1 This Society Notes:

- The overwhelming majority of our society is made up of undergraduates, despite there being a large cohort of postgraduate students (approx. 300). Postgraduate students do not interact with the society on a frequent basis.
- Postgraduate students often have different academic and social needs compared to Undergraduates, which may not always be addressed or be practical within the Societies' general events.
- There is a gap in representation for Postgraduate Students – who unlike undergraduates do not get the opportunity to become Freshers Representatives in their first year, have may have limited time to socialise within the society.

2 This Society Believes:

- A postgraduate representative will help postgraduate student interaction with the society and help us to be more inclusive of Computer Science students and those interested in the field.
- Increased activity from postgraduate students would enrich the societies diversity and inclusivity.

3 This Society Resolves:

- The following lines should be added to the constitution:
